DR. WILLIAM H. ROW

IN MEMORIAM

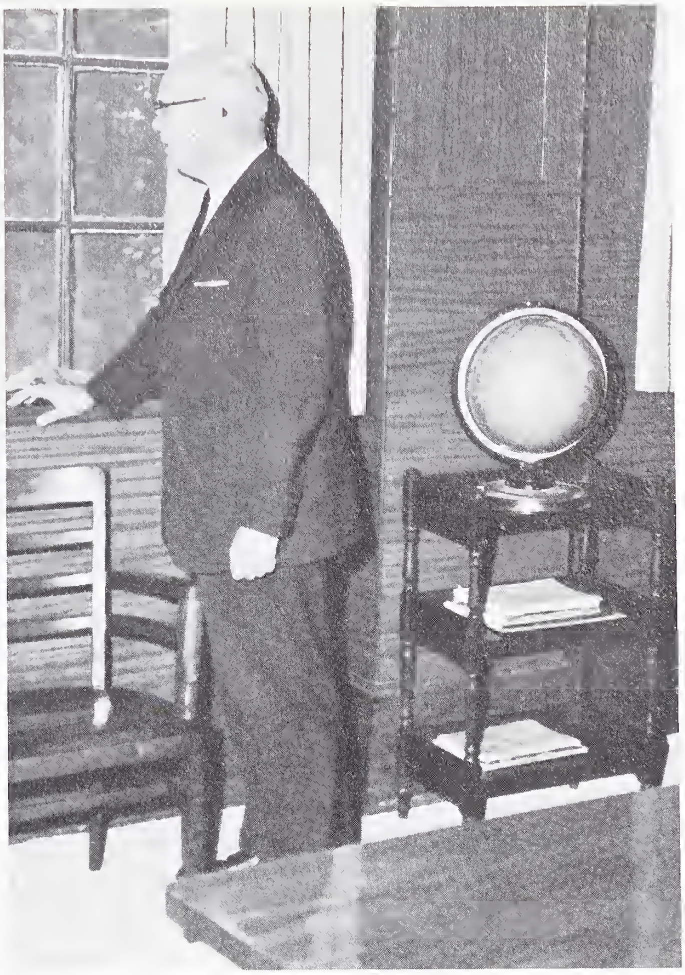
For his concern and interest in the welfare of each individual,

For his dedication to the highest ideals of education,

For his counsel, his friendship, and his understanding,

For the major role he has played in making West Georgia College the outstanding institution that it is today,

For all these reasons and others, we dedicate this volume, the Chieftain of 1961, to the new President of West Georgia College, Dr. William H. Row.



West Georgia, where we spent the years . . .

Time, preserved by memory, is like a gull caught in the wind . . . the crackling quilt across the campus in fall . . . the warm hand of a new friend . . . the face of a stranger, now familiar . . . the finiteness of being new and confused . . . the whack of ball against racket in the still air of weekend tranquility . . . the silly little boy with a duck in a white fountain . . . the thud of feet on the gymnasium floor . . . the stimulating clash of idea and ignorance . . . the shy goodnight of a pretty girl . . . the enthusiasm of holiday exodus and the mixed emotions of return . . . the beckoning warmth of Gunn House in a rainstorm . . . the blare of hi-fi and the silence of an empty dorm . . . time preserved by memory, is like a gull caught in the wind . . .

Queen Teddi and her court: Jimmie Lee Ridley, Ruth McAfee, Louise Hale, and Nona Wood

The West Georgia College Campus was taken by surprise early on the morning of October 11, 1960 when two courageous upperclassmen shot down an R-2 plane which was "endeavoring to obtain information now concealed behind the Ivy Curtain of the college." At that minute all upperclassmen realized the serious threat that the dirty rat creatures presented. The strong upperclassmen forces were soon organized and the threat was immediately eliminated. The lowly rats were forced to entertain the upperclassmen and faculty at a Rat Talent Show and then were put to hard labor on work day in punishment for their many dirty deeds. The show-down came on October 13, the day of "Rat Court" when the lowly rats paid in full for their attempted invasion of our quiet little campus. All debts being paid in full, the rats were liberated and declared full-fledged members of West Georgia's student body.

Introduction to Theater classes learn of the backstage and pre-planning of a production.

The theater production each quarter is an enjoyable and enlightening experience for the cast, crew, and audience. This year's three outstanding productions, The Man Who Came to Dinner, Our Town, and The Boyfriend, will long be remembered in the minds of the students. All three plays were ably directed by Wallace Buice, assisted by Mary Elizabeth Thompson, and Ronnie Duffey.

President Emeritus

PRESIDENT ROW'S MESSAGE

Dr. Row passed away March 10, 1961. This letter to the students was written by him several weeks before this time.

Dear Students:

Through this medium I send you personal greetings. I find myself wishing for the abilities of a great writer that I might convey the sincere feelings of concern, respect, interest, and love that I hold for you.

You are the product of this institution and whatever you become, so becomes West Georgia College. This may sound like a selfish interest but it is not meant in that manner. As President Emeritus Ingram stated in last year's Chieftain, it is the purpose of this institution to instruct and inspire to the end that you might acquire characteristics of simplicity, honesty, humility, competency, curiosity, and the search for truth, and a healthful respect for the dignity of every individual, as well as to prepare you academically for your life's work. We can accomplish these goals only to the extent to which we have real feelings of concern, respect, interest, and love for you. The profile of our graduates through the years assures us that this feeling has been sincere and productive.

West Georgia College has many distinct and worthy traditions, goals, and achievements that were established by my predecessor and the outstanding staffs he attracted through the years. The institution inevitably will grow, despite the fact that we would prefer to remain small; but it is my dedicated intent that we will build upon and be guided by these goals that already have been established. Enrollment will change, fields will be added, services will be extended. But our product, which is you, will always have the worthy characteristics mentioned above.

Please know that all of us on the staff have a profound interest in each of you. We are anxious to follow your progress, and we will be greatly pleased if you will keep us advised as to your activities in the years ahead.

Sincerely,
WILLIAM H. ROW

EDITOR'S EPITAPH

To those like Ronnie and Dot—
who work without being pushed.
To those like Margie—
who take pictures in the rain.
To those like Pat—
who work on the week-ends.
To those like Bivian—
who walk the streets selling ads.
To those like Lee—
who never refuse to work.
To those like Mr. Shaw—
who listen without laughing.
To those like Nellie—
who sit up until 3 A.M.
I give my thanks.

We are finished now—the rest is left to you, the student body. We have done our best and feel that we have produced a good book. We hope you will love it as we do—accept it, bad points as well as good, and make it a part of yourself as it is meant to be. What you have done, it has done; what you have said, it has said; where you have been, it has been. It records your joys and sorrows, your likes and dislikes, your leaders and followers, your strengths and weaknesses. It is what you are.
